Dear Renny Rantucci;

On behalf of Walmart Canada and Stuart Olson, we would like to express our gratitude and appreciation to you, your organization, and employees.

As part of the Walmart Canada Perishable Distribution Centre project, we endeavor for excellence and innovation in our sustainability program. We also continually look for new ways to further reduce our environmental footprint. With the help of Neil Bass, we are working towards these goals. Neil's willingness to go above and beyond what was expected made him deserving of this recognition. He and Mel Murry are deserving of this recognition due to the fact that they went out of their way to research and find an alternative use for the packaging, which would normally have been sent to a landfill.

We encourage you and your employees to come forward with any other initiatives that my further contribute to the program's success. We hope that through our sustainability-related efforts on this project we may begin a new chapter in construction, one that strives to reduce the amount of waste generated on construction sites and our impact on the planet.

Sincerely;

Paul Polson
